

networking

Women's group offers helping hand

In the '80s, Annie Lenox sang, "Sisters are doing it for themselves." Why shouldn't they? Nowadays, women can earn more than men.

Women can enhance this earning power by meeting other successful women in business and learning from them. A group in Philadelphia is devoted to that purpose. Women face many of the same challenges as men in their search for success, but they also encounter their own unique situations. The best way to avoid making the same mistakes is from meeting peers or mentors that acts as guides through the networking process.

Organization name: Professional Women's Roundtable

History/Mission: PWR is a network of professional women for whom networking and/or business development is part of their professional responsibilities. PWR participants meet on a regular basis to hone business development and other skills, strengthen their professional network, and cultivate new business prospects.

Number of Members: 60

Age Range: 24-45

Membership

requirements/fee to join: Ideal participants have five to 15 years

experience in profession or career. She is focused on enhancing

her networking and business skills, as well as the other skills necessary to advance in today's marketplace. Cost of $160 for annual membership

includes all events or $60

annual plus $10 per monthly event.

Annual/upcoming events:

Thursday from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.: One Year Anniversary Celebration — Fun-filled fashion advice featuring Sandra Alton

Gordon Wong

Submissions
or questions:
aeiouphiladelphia @yahoo.com

of Tiffany & Co. and Mary Dougherty of Nicole Miller at the Bellevue, 200 S. Broad St.

Sept. 18: Joni Daniels, author of "Power Tools for Women" and motivational speaker.

Web site: www.pwroundtable.com

E-mail: Memberships@PWRoundtable.com